in 2013 georg baselitz declared that women don t paint very well whilst shocking his comments reveal what helen górrill argues is prolific discrimination in the artworld in a groundbreaking study of gender and value górrill proves that there are few aesthetic differences in men and women s painting but that men s art is valued at up to 80 per cent more than women s indeed the power of masculinity is such that when men sign their work it goes up in value yet when women sign their work it goes down museums the author attests are also complicit in this vicious cycle as they collect tokenist female artwork which impinges upon its artists market value an essential text for students and teachers górrill s book is provocative and challenges existing methodologies whilst introducing shocking evidence she proves how the price of being a woman impacts upon all forms of artistic currency be it social cultural or economic and in the vanguard of the me too movement calls for the artworld to take action more than that of any other modern people french art is a national expression it epitomizes very definitely the national ¾sthetic judgment and feeling and if its manifestations are even more varied than are elsewhere to be met with they share a certain character that is very salient of almost any french picture or statue of any modern epoch one s first thought is that it is french the national quite overshadows the personal quality in the field of the fine arts as in nearly every other in which the french genius shows itself the results are evident of an intellectual co operation which insures the development of a common standard and tends to subordinate idiosyncrasy the fine arts as well as every other department of mental activity reveal the effect of that social instinct which is so much more powerful in france than it is anywhere else or has ever been elsewhere except possibly in the case of the athenian republic add to this influence that of the intellectual as distinguished from the sensuous instinct and one has i think the key to this salient characteristic of french art which strikes one so sharply and always as so plainly french as one walks through the french rooms at the louvre through the galleries of the luxembourg through the unending rooms of the salon he is impressed by the splendid competence everywhere displayed the high standard of culture universally attested by the overwhelming evidence that france stands at the head of the modern world ¾sthetically but not less i think does one feel the absence of imagination opportunity of spirituality of poetry in a word the french themselves feel something of this at the great exposition of 1889 no pictures were so much admired by them as the english in which appeared even to an excessive degree just the qualities in which french art is lacking and which less than those of any other school showed traces of the now all but universal influence of french art the most distinct and durable impression left by any exhibition of french pictures is that the french ¾sthetic genius is at once admirably artistic and extremely little poetic
